From Owning To Living

THE structural shift REDEFINING HOW A GENERATION spends, connects, AND belongs.

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED ©2026

For most of the past century, the consumer logic was stable: you earned, you acquired, and what you owned told people where you stood.

Then, over the course of roughly one decade, accelerated sharply after 2020, a fundamental reorientation took place.

The generation now entering its peak earning years does not define identity through possession. It defines it through presence: where they were, what they lived, who they were with.

From possession to presence.
From exposure to depth.
From access to alignment.
From ownership to belonging

[WHAT WE'VE BUILT]

Three years.
Two cities.
One community.

2023

THE REJECTION

"You're charging people to meet each other. That will never work."

Our first potential partner was wrong about the business, but right about the lesson. It forced us to define what we actually sell. The activity is the excuse. The room is the product.

2024

THE DECISION

"We said no far more than we said yes."

Every early instinct said grow fast, open the doors, fix quality later. We did the opposite. Exclusivity as a gimmick can be faked - quality can't. Our rejection criteria became our positioning statement.

2025

EXPANSION

"We've never signed a lease."

Two cities, 300+ experiences, a partnership with Four Seasons on retreats - built on editorial standard, a curated community, and the right person on the ground.

Location is overhead. Community is the one asset that appreciates.

The operating framework

[CURATION]

Of experiences and of members. Both held to the same standard - intentional selection is the product

[COMMUNITY]

The product becomes the people in the room. The flywheel:

experience > satisfaction > recommendation > application.

[CONTINUITY]

One great experience creates a memory. A rhythm of them creates an identity. The register changes. The intention doesn't

[CONSTRAINTS]

Complexity is the real threat, not competition. We hold the standard, we delegate execution. Staying narrow on what we control is what lets us scale.

[07 - WHY BRANDS COME TO US]

TRUST OVER REACH

You can buy attention. Trust has to be built.

People see between 4,000 and 10,000 ads a day and have learned to tune out almost all of them. What brands can't simply buy is presence and trust — a room of people who showed up because they wanted to be there, in a setting we've spent three years building a reputation around.

LOSING GROUND

- LOGO-DRIVEN GOODS
- MASS SOCIAL PLATFORMS
- TRANSACTIONAL NETWORKING

ACCELERATING

- SELECTIVE ACCESS MEMBERSHIPS
- CURATED LIVE EXPERIENCES

[08 - THREE PREDICTIONS]
WHERE THIS GOES next

01 Physical flagships will serve branding, not community.

The brands that win will show up in six cities without owning a square meter in any of them.

02 Membership is the new loyalty program.

The next architecture is access — to people, to moments, to things you can't Google your way into.

03 Editorial standard is the new differentiator.

Anyone can generate content now. What AI can't generate is a point of view the deliberate choices about what you say yes to, what you refuse, and the taste that makes everything unmistakably yours.

[09 — FIVE TAKEAWAYS]
WHAT TO leave WITH

01
Define your brand by what you refuse.

Write down your rejection criteria before your growth targets — that list is your positioning statement.

02
Stop designing the product. Start designing the room.

Ask who is in it and what happens between them — that's what people are actually paying for.

03
Invest in trust before you invest in reach.

One experience people talk about will outperform a campaign they scroll past. what happens between them — that's what

04
Don't let location define your growth

Build the standard and the community first — they travel with you.

05
Don't settle for one great moment. Build a rhythm.

A single experience gets noticed — a cadence builds an identity people come back for.

Paris. Madrid. Then wherever the right people gather.

JOMO's expansion thesis is clear: the model does not require real estate.
It requires the right community, the right editorial standard, and the right team on the ground.

Every city JOMO enters is a city where the problem exists. That is most of them.
